To whom it may concern,

I am writing this brief letter indicating we have no objection if Tim Powers wants to put together his writings we have published on our site over the past three years in published book form. Any such content is not copyrighted by WesternJournalism.com or the Western Center for Journalism, and Tim is free to use it as he pleases.

On a personal note, I have had the honor of getting to know Tim over the last few years. He is as patriotic as they come and passionately loves God and his country. Contributors to our site come and go, but Tim has stuck around for a while; you have no idea how much we appreciate that.

Sincerely,

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, —That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to affect their Safety and Happiness.

Foreword

As I was assisting my son, Tim Powers, in compiling his ongoing writings, my mind wandered back to my youth. I grew up during the war years—WWII—and I remember how America struggled during those years. I remember the day my father rushed in the front door from work and declared, “We’re at war! They just bombed Pearl Harbor!” I remember the gas rationing. Everyone had a “sticker” on the windshields of their vehicles and could only get gas on certain days. My mother would break and knead a food coloring capsule into a block of something of lard consistency and use it as butter because you couldn’t buy real butter. Sugar was rationed, along with several other items of necessity. I remember my mom and my aunts “painting” their legs with a light tan-colored cream and trying to put the “seam” up the backs of their legs with a colored pencil to look as if they had nylons on because you couldn’t buy stockings. They were hard times for America, but her people remained strong. I remember my father talking about how the factory he was working in became a “defense” plant, and women were being hired to do the jobs of the men who were either drafted or willingly volunteered into service to fight to keep our country free. A lot of them never returned home.

Hitler promised the German people hope and change. Even though he was Austrian born and not a true German, the German people were enthralled by his many speeches. He was a great orator, and he held the German people captivated, just as President Barack Hussein Obama did during his initial campaign and, for some, even now.

Hitler’s goal was to create a master race for Germany and ultimately do away with those who didn’t fit in. He was able to use gun control to disarm the Nazi regime’s enemies and gain complete control of power. Those outside the Nazi regime were rendered defenseless. They were then put on trains and transported to the death camps for extermination. He succeeded in having the schoolchildren indoctrinated into the Nazi regime (e.g., Hitler’s Brown Shirts). The children were taught that they needed to tell their teachers if they heard their parents or any adult speaking against the government. When they did, their parents received a visit from the SA—Nazi Stormtroopers— and they were hauled away as enemies of the government.

America was a strong country. We fought against and defeated the tyranny that was going on in Nazi Germany and kept it from ever coming to this nation, keeping our nation a strong and free country. Now, unfortunately, our country has been infiltrated with the people who want to see us become a weak nation and fall to their ideologies. President Obama promised hope and change and promised that he would incrementally and fundamentally change America. No one ever questioned how he was going to do that.

Tim's Chronicles in History tells the incremental and fundamental changes that have slowly been taking over America, as it happened in pre-Nazi Germany. Through his writings, he is bringing forth the gradual fall and "takeover" of our nation in an effort to make more people aware of what is really happening in this country. Through the Common Core program in our schools today, our children are being indoctrinated into believing that the government must be depended on for all phases of their lives. They are required to answer questions that border on their family's personal lives and should be of no business to anyone but their families. There is a big move to ban certain types of guns and bullets to keep the American public from owning them under the guise of making it safer for our children. The push is on to eventually disarm the American populace so there will be no "threat" to those who want supreme power. What will be next?

"While the United States remains a free and prosperous country after its pivotal role in defeating Nazi Germany in World War II, it cannot take for granted the safeguards built into its constitutional system to deter the rise of unchecked power.”¹ America is facing threats to our liberty and freedoms, and the history of the Nazi regime remains a lesson to be followed. Tim’s Chronicles show that history is repeating itself.

Introduction

As I started on my journey through life as an average American, I, like most others, trusted my government. I felt confident that our elected leaders would always do the right thing on behalf of the American people. That was until Barack Hussein Obama.

I'm not sure if it was the spirit of the living God rising up inside of me, but I developed a knot in my stomach that until this very day has not left me. As I see America die before my eyes more and more every day, I develop even more drive and endurance to go forth and try to wake up my fellow Americans. A modern-day Paul Revere or Ben Franklin I certainly am not. I am, however, a freedom-loving American and have tried with all my heart and soul to do my part to restore our great republic.

Please enjoy my book as these writings have truly come from my heart and soul to be established as Chronicles in History.

The Organized Destruction of America through Political Correctness

March 3, 2012

Being a man in my midforties, raised in a prepolitical correctness society, I have come to realize what is happening in our country today. We have compromised our principles and our integrity. Every day, it seems, in the midst of all the political theatrics of the day, someone says something that offends another, and before you know it, you may hear the words “I misspoke” or something along those lines. The average person no longer has a voice in society for fear of offending someone else. Case in point, Rick Santorum refers to Barack Obama as a snob for continuously pushing for higher education. Well, if anyone has noticed, where does Barack Obama give the bulk of his speeches? At universities or community colleges. Rick Santorum has since apologized for his comment. Why? Mr. Santorum, in my view, is entitled to his opinion as is guaranteed by the First Amendment. But, as usual, political correctness ruled the day. Now jump to the firestorm that Rush Limbaugh is now enduring. Nancy Pelosi marches out a Georgetown student to admit that she has sex so much that she cannot afford contraception and therefore the rest of us should pay for it? Rush, in this case, is correct. In my upbringing, someone who was that sexually promiscuous was referred to as a harlot, slut, or whore. But after Rush's comments, the politically correct crowd has called for his ruination. This country, I believe, has come to a point where everything is acceptable, as long as the collective agrees with it.

The question that I now have for Americans is this: if our founding fathers were politically correct and fell in line with the collective, would there be a United States of America today? I dare say not. We have become a society where everyone gets a participation trophy. The new motto is, "It's not if you win or lose, it's how you play the game." If our founders had adopted that strategy, we would still be under British rule. America is fast becoming a group of spineless cowards, with the exception of those who stand strong against political correctness and do not compromise their integrity. One does not have to look far to see the damage that political correctness has done to American society.

As far as I can tell, political correctness started its ascendancy into American politics around the time of the Carter administration. It became much more amplified during the Clinton administration, and it has become totally out of control during the Obama administration. All one has to do is look at the current political arena. When the Democratic Party controlled both houses of Congress and the presidency, there was absolutely no compromise with their Republican colleagues, even when the Democrats violated the US Constitution with the individual mandate set forth in ObamaCare. In 2010, America spoke and the Republican Party took control of the US House of Representatives. Now that the Democrats can no longer run roughshod over the will of the American people, they are insisting that the Republicans compromise on every issue facing our great nation. It is now a fact that Barack Obama is now basing his entire campaign on what he refers to as a “do-nothing Congress.”

My fear for America? My fear is that America will become a namby-pamby society that is dictated to by a few educated elitists at the top and that the freedom and intestinal fortitude that was installed in us by God and our founding fathers will become a thing of the past. We must wake up as individual Americans, realize our inner strengths, and seek the help of other like-minded Americans to conquer our weaknesses. We must recognize our rugged individualism but stand together as one nation, under God, with liberty and justice for all.

Who Is Really Running the United States of America?

March 4, 2012

It doesn't require a rocket scientist to see who has the real power in federal government. That would belong to Harry Reid. Since the 2010 elections, the Republican controlled House of Representatives has sent several bills to the Senate that would get America's economy back on track.

Harry Reid, in his infinite wisdom and a shot of Obama Kool-Aid, has deemed them "dead on arrival." The last that I knew, our government was supposed to represent "we the people" and at least allow each issue to be placed on the floor for open and honest debate. I haven't figured out yet why our constitutional scholars haven't found a way to correct this problem as it looks like absolute dereliction of duty on Harry Reid's part.
